The natural history editor of the Lexington Press tells this: "A lady residing in a city not a hundred miles from Lexington is the possessor of two pets-a ington is the possessor of two pets—a monkey and a parrot—who are by no means congenial friends; in fact, Mrs. C. was in the habit of locking up the monkey whenever she left the house, for fear of his belligerent qualities. One evoling, alasi she neglected to do so, and the monkey coming in found the parrot rife for a fight, and a very desperate one ensued. The monkey ruthlessly pulled out every feather of the unfortunate parrot, and broke up the mantel ornaments, and smashed things generally. When Mrs. C. returned, she found the monkey chattering on the mantelthe monkey chattering on the mantelpiece, and out crept the parrot, looking deeply injured, and greeted her with, 'We've had a hell of a time.' The appropriateness of the remark caused a shout of laughter."

GENERAL GRANT'S THIED TERM .- The London Economist says: "We do not suppose that the Americans will permit the etiquette about re-elections to be broken in 1876, but we can see quite clearly that General Grant will have a chance of a third term, such as his predecessors have never enjoyed. The South will be in his hands, and if the parties are even tolerably equal, the President, who, while President, carries the whole negro vote, will be, for one party or the other, the only unconquerable candidate. We may yet date from this election a real and a verificant or the card of the carries are the election a real and a considerable change in American politics, for apart from all considerations of personal character, it has, as we conceive, enormously strengthened the hands of the Presidency itself.

A terrible nitro-glycerine accident occurred in Yonkers, New York, a few days ago. Cans of this terrible material had been placed in different localities, preparatory to being exploded, and, notwithstanding precautionary notices of danger, several boys, imagining them-selves beyond the pale of danger, rolled a heavy stone from a projection upon the cans, when an explosion occurred, which instantly killed two and mortally wounded a third. The explosion was heard for miles, and window glasses in the vicinity were smashed.

They tell a good story about Colonel Davidson, Adjutant General of Texas. He received a bogus despatch from Bell County, indicating his election to the State Senate, whereupon he promptly resignation was promptly accepted. If he had it to do again he would wait for the official returns. the official returns.
